Cost Is Put at $20 Million—Union Still Has to Negotiate a Pact Extends for 120 Miles

By DAMON STETSON The Patrolmen's Benevolent Assocition yesterday won its long court battl for a 1975 pay increase of 6 percent, a $900 per officer, but the union still mus negotiate an agreement covering the cut rent two-year contract period.

The victory came in a 4-to-2 ruling b the State Court of Appeals that the 197; wage freeze did not apply to the disputed 1975 increase awarded by an impass panel and subsequently confirmed by State Supreme Court indgment. :

The P.B.A.'s success in the courts removed one of the snags in the protracted negotiations for a new contract, which led last fall to frequent demonstrations and protests by dissatisfied police officers.

Douglas D. Weaving, president of the P.B.A., said that he was "positively delighted" by what he called a long overdue decision affirming the union's posi-tion. It means, he said, that each of the city's more than 18,000 police officers? will receive a retroactive check for $1,129! -$900 from the 6 percent retroactive that the break between the Governor and pay for the period from Sept. 1, 1975, to July 1, 1976, and $229 in old cost-of-

Ford Said to Plan an Aid Proposal $800 Million Below Israeli Request

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN

Ford had decided to propose a $1.5 billion foreign aid package for Israel in the next fiscal year—$800 million less than Israel requested and $300 million less than the State Department recommended.

State Department recommended.

The President's action, taken before he departed for Vail, Col., on Saturday, has caused concern among Israelis and they have requested that Mr. Ford reconsider his action before he submits his final-budget message to Congress next mooth. Ambassador Simcha Dinitz of Israel raised the issue with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger this morning and re-Henry A. As a result of this discussion, Israelis maintained that no final decision had been made yet by the Ford Administra-tion. But well-placed Administration officials said that unless Mr. Ford changed his mind the decision had been made. The issue has more than economic con-

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—Administra-tion officials said today that President proposed and Coogress approved a $2.3 proposed and Coogress approved a $2.3 billion aid package for the fiscal year that ended last June 30.

Of that total, $1.5 billion was for military credits, half of which do not bave to be repaid, and the rest for economic aid. This was the largest aid request evar aid. This was the largest aid request evar made for a single country to one year. For the fiscal year that ends next Sept. 30, the Ford Administration proposed only $1.8 billion, of which $1 billion was in military credits. This $500 million "out" upset Israel's supporters, who tried to restore it by seeking $500 million for the three-month period between June 30 and Oct. 1, when the Government went through a transition from an old July-to-July fiscal year to a new October-to-October one.

Originally, Mr. Ford opposed any additional money for Israel during the transitional quarter, but be eventually bowed to political pressure and approved a $300 million addition

$2.3 Billion Sought by Israel

The issue has more than economic consequences for the Israelis. Because of the moves taken by Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin to call for early parliamentary elections, the size of the American aid package to Israel will inevitably have an impact on the Israeli political scene, Israelis and American officials said.

Little Coocern So Far in Congress

Word of Mr. Ford's decision to propose the $1.5 billion figure recommended by the Office of Management and Budget has been circulating quietly in Washington but so far it has not aroused very much concern among supporters of Israel on Capitol Hill.

Several of them sold today that if the Israeli appeal to Mr. Ford failed, the matter would be raised with Jimmy Carter as soon as he becomes President on Jan. 20. The bope is that in his amended budget traquest the aid figure for Israel will rise.

As a result, the agents were able to hold up a further shipment of 100 more of the submachine guns, designated M-10, which had been manufactured by a now defunct small-arms company.

Arafat Endorses State For the Palestinians

NICOSIA, Cyprus, Dec. 22 (AP)—Yasir Arafat, the Palestinian leader, said today the the Palestinian movement would act the a state on "any piece of liberated Palestinian soil," according to the radio of Saudi Arabia.

Mr. Arafat's comment was interpreted as an indication of williogness to accept a Palestinian state in the Israeli-occupied territories of the West Bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip, should this be decided at an expected resumption in 1977 of the Middle East peace talks in Geneva.

Mrs. Gandhi Carries Out Two Cabinet Changes

NEW DELHI, Dec. 22 (AP)—Prime Minister Indira Gandhi carried out a minor cabinet shuffle today with the appointment of one minister and the resignation of another.

The changes were a prelude to the Congress Party's formation of a state government in Gujarat, which had been a stronghold of right-wing opponents of Mrs. Gandhi before it was put under federal control 10 months ago.

Hitendra Desai, the Gujarat Congress leader who had been a contender to head the new state government was brought into the federal Cabinet as Works and Housing Minister. Political observers bere said he received the Cabinet post because party leaders had chosen another Gujarat politician, Madhay Sinh Solanki, to bead the state government.

The Cabinet minister who resigned was Raj Bahadur, who is to be appointed a state governor. He had led the Ministry of Tourism and Civil Aviation, which was given to an incumbent minister.

A Town in Spain Cries Fraud and Has Its 'No' Vote Declared Void

CONSUEGRA, Spain, Dec. 21—This charming town, once known for little more than secrembling ruins of a castle and nine white windmills perched on a high bluff, emerged from obscurity lest week last week.

When the ballots were counted, Consuegra was the only place in Spain that had voted "No" to the proposal of King Juan Carlos's Government to hold free elections next year for a new twochamber Parliament. The official tally here was 2,909 no votes, 2,371 yes votes, 253 blank ballots and 21 invalid ballots in a population of 9,823.

The only hitch was that many voters in Consuegra, a town of farmers and construction workers on the plain of New Castile, were convinced that they had not voted much differently from the 94.2 percent of their countrymen who cast "Yes" ballots.

As the election returns began to trickle in from Madrid, the people of this town, 35 miles southeast of Toledo, began to resent their overnight reputa-tion as "the one fascist place in Spain."

Mayor and Bosses' Accused Spontaneously, shops were shuttered and an angry crowd of several thousand gathered in the tree-shaded Plaza de España. It stayed until 4 in the morning, in the cold rain, shouting slogans against Mayor Pedro Albacete del Pozo and "the bosses."

At the tim eof the cultinational corporations subcommittee bearings in 1973, it was not publicly knnwn that the C.I.A. had initiated a major secret operation of its own against the government of Chilean President, Salvador Allende Goseen, spending more than $8 million to prop up Mr. Allende's oponents. Mr. Allende, a Marxist, whose electibo in 1970 was hitterly comosed by the United States. Mr. Helms, who will leave his ambassadorial post at the end of the year, has been under intensive Justice Depart investigation for two years because of his previous Senate testimony decaying that the CLA bad conducted domestic intelligerate and also denying that the agency had financially supported the opponenta of Mr. Allende.

Prosecution in those inquiries was not sought, in part because Mr. Helms sought to "correct" some of his earlier testimony, thus blurring the record. Justice Department officials said at the fime. The revitalized grand jury investigation was spurred, all sources agreed, by the decision of Harold V. Hendrix, former Miami newspaperman and LTT, political operative, to conperate with Government prosecutors in return for being permitted to plead guilty to a misdemeanor charge stemming from his admittedly false testi-

The Justice Department obtained copies ni subsequent C.I.A. reports of those conversations, the court was told, that indicate Mr. Hendrix's intention was "to withhold from the committee the fact that he had been in contact with the C.I.A."

The bearing further showed that Mr. Hendrix, who woo a Pulitzer Prize in 1963 for his reporting on the Soviet missile buildup in Cuba, bad "on many occa-sinns" both been given information by the C.I.A. and provided the agency with material he had obtained. He continued to do so, the transcript said, after leaving The Miami News and joining I.T.T. in 1967.

ATime For Reflection. Does Anyone Really Care About Vivisection? Some Don't Know. The many people who don't even know what vivisection is don't know if they care. For those of you who don't know, vivisection is defined as animal experimentation, especially if considered to cause distress and pain to the subject. Among those who do care about vivisection are the people in the billion dollar a year animal research industry who defend the practice by saying that it is necessary to save or prolong human life. In fact, an estimated 70% of all animal experimentation is performed not for medical purposes but for cosmetic testing and other non-medical purposes. We Are Against It. Finally, we, the members of the New England Anti-Vivisection Society care about vivisection. We care for the millions of helpless animals tortured, maimed and killed each year in research laboratories throughout this country. We believe (as do many scientists) that the validity of findings from animal research as applied to man are highly suspect and that the practice of vivisection is immoral. We want to stop it. Nantucketers Understand Fragility of Island Far at Sea

By CHRISTOPHER LYDON

Special to The New York Times NANTUCKET, Mass., Dec. 22-The miracle of Nantucket was always that it survived at all. For all the summertime splendor of Main Street's mansions and shops, for all the pristine perfection of nearly 1,000 town houses of the whaling era and before, The Talk the island still looks from

of the air like a wisp of sand Nantucket called it an "anthill in the sea" in Chapter 14 of "Moby Dick" and marveled: "Look at it—a mere hillock, an elbow of sand it—a mere hillock, an elbow of sand; all beach, without a background. There is more sand there than you would use in 20 years as a substitute for blotting paper. Some gamesome wights will tell that you have to plant weeds there, they don't grow naturally; that they import Canada thistles; that they have to send beyond seas for a spile [a plug] to stop a leak in an eil cast."

As the worst oil leak ever in American water and a spile a plug and the season of the season of

As the worst oil leak ever in American waters moved tentatively away from Nantucket's beaches, the temptation among islanders here was to be cavalier. "We're used to these natural disasters," said Robert F. Mooney, the town prosecutor, turning puckish. Maybe we'd better send ao emergency message to Plains. Ga., aod ask for more reporters up here."

Nantucket in the wintertime is a proudly isolated town of some 5,000 weather-proof souls who voted last spring to start construction of ao airspring to start construction of an air-port motel designed to service oilmen drilling on fish-rich Georges Bank off the Nantucket coast; at the same time Nantucketers were voting by a margin of 3 to 2 against the so-called Kennedy Bill that would have put land and wild-life protection into the powerful hands of the Federal Covernment of the Federal Government.

The islanders' view has long been that they, and perhaps only they, under-stand the fragility of this "land far out to sea," as the Indians named it, be-cause they have lived with the Immense power of wind and water 30 miles out in the North Atlantic, Accordingly visitors inquiring about the Argo Merchant oil emergency are sometimes treated to amused disdain. "Remember that two reporters in one day is at least one too many for most Nantucketers."
Mr. Mooney said, "We're not used to being followed around by 'the boys on

"I'm not that upset," said Walter Glidden, Nantucket's busiest fisb dealer, "because I'm a guy that takes one day at a time. I've never seen anything like this before. What are you going

The lesson here, though islanders

The lesson here, though islanders doubt that outsiders and especially the oil industry will learn it, involves humility before the natural elements. "It's probably our good fortune," said Bob Dennis, a sport fisherman and activist member of the Nantucket Land Council, "to be shown the impact of an oil spill. But what kind of good fortune is that? I don't think if they'd drilled off Georges for 20 years they drilled off Georges for 20 years they would have spilled the seven million gallons that were in that tanker."

A Nantucket whaleman that Melville celebrated is extinct. Melville wrote, "Two-thirds of this terraqueous globe are the Nantucketer's. For the sea is his: he owns it as Emperors own em-

But commercial fishing has been resurgent here, as bas the mainland coast of New England, and the gravest concern about the oil damage [much more than for tourism] was being expressed by fishermen, not only for their balance sheet but for the natural balance. balance sheets but for the natural bal-ance of marine life.

Bill Blount, a red-bearded 31-year-old, originally from Newport, R.L, is one of numerous young men, mostly college-educated entrepreneurs, sons of the middle class, who bave undertaken the rugged fishing business of Nantucket. They have done well in it. An aggressive fisherman with a good boat can net between $50,000 and $100,000 can net between $50,000 and $100,000 a year.

And they had hoped to do better with the new 200-mile limit protecting coastal fishing grounds from foreign intruders. Today on Straight Wharf, waiting for this morning's stiff wind to calm, Mr. Blount worried about loog range effects of the spill. "If it gets down to the bottom, be said, "it will still be bubbling up 10 years from now. It will never be gone.
"It's going to cut out a big fishing

"It's going to cut out a big fishing area that I might have worked on," Mr. Blount said. "You see, fish migrate through the Nantucket Shoals, and some of them are spawning there now. Codfish, yellowtails, flounders, daylights, sand dabs and sea dabs, haddack, sand dabs and sea dabs, haddack, sand dabs, and sea dabs, haddack, sand dabs, and sea dabs, haddack. dock, grey sole and lemon sole—all your winter fish spawn up and down this coast from December Into the spring, and all that oil rolling around is going to spread a lot of poison over the eggs and young fish.

"If the oil rolls off to the southeast along the bottom, it will roll into all the sea canyons that the lobsters use as their base of operation-Veatch Canyon, Lydonia Canyon, Hydrogra-pher Canyon," Mr. Blount said, poring over the nautical charts of the edge of the Continental Shelf.

Yesterday. Bill Blount found "I couldn't watch" when gulls landed on his boat, preening their oil-soaked feathers with their beaks in a cleaning process that would doom the birds because of the poison they ware estimated.

That was Friday night, a day after the Los Angeles City Council, over the protest of eovironmentalists and safety engineers, had voted to approve the proposed construction of a huge liquefied-natural gas facility at the port, At that meeting. In a suit filed yesterday in United States District Court, the department asked for an order to halt discriminatory hiring and to require the city and county to hire more women, blacks and Spanishsurnamed workers.

The city's Fire Department was singled out as the worst offender, although all other departments of city and county government were named, with the exception of the San Diego Police Department. The suit said that of the Fire Department's 667 uniformed personnel only 23 were Spanish-surnamed, 22 were black and none were women. The suit said that the hiring practices violated the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Equal Employment Opportunities Act of 1972, the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act of 1972, and the 14th Amendment to the Constitution.

Ford Recalling Granadas With Old Gasoline Cabs

DETROIT, Dec. 22 (AP)—The Ford Motor Company is recalling 4,400 new Granadas because they may have been fitted with year-old gasoline caps that do not meet revised Federal safety

The company said today that 1976model caps were "inadvertently installed" on some of the 1977 models produced between Sept. 1 and Octo. 18.

The 1977-model caps have been re-lesigned to meet new Federal rules dealing with fuel-system integrity after rear barrier crash tests, Ford said. A spokesman said there had been no reports of fires or injuries resulting from the problem. He said all the cara would be inspected and 1977-model caps would be inspected and 1977-model caps would be installed, if necessary, at no cost to the owner. Also affected by the recall are 350 Granadas in Canada and overseas.

U.S. Opposes Klan's Use Of School for a Meeting

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (UPI)-The WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (UPI)—The Government contends that the Ku Klux Klan should not be allowed to use a high school auditorium for a "patriotic meeting," because that would undermine efforts to desegregate public schools.

of the Bellaire High School auditorium in East Baton Rouge, La.

The school board initially approved the rental application, but changed its mind after an H.E.W. official warned that Klan use of the building would lead to proceedings to cut off the school system's Federal aid. Bellaire has been under a court desegregation order.

The Klan went to court to obtain access to the school auditorium. A Federal district court upheld denial to the facil-ities, and the case is before an appeals court.

The brief said that a Klan meeting in a public school represented a greater threat to the Government and the interests of school desegregation than any harm the Klan might suffer by demal of its rights to free speech.

In both cases the viroses were identified independently by scientists at the University of Wisconsin and at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, the Federal agency in charge of the nationwide influ-

Since then the two cases in Wisconsin have been the only known isolations of swine flu virus from bumans anywhere in the world. Experts generally seem to attribute the discovery of these cases pri-marily to the fact that the search for flu virus is more intense than ever before.

Scientists in many centers, however, expect to learn much about the natural The Center for Disease Control draws its continually changing profile of flu and flu-like illness in the United States from about 5,000 individual sources that include state and local bealth departments,

An important part of the virus detection effort is a cooperating group of 10 medi-cal center laboratories conducting their oint search on contract with the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, a unit of the National Institutes of Health.

Dr. William M. Marine of the University of Colorado, in Denver, who coordinates this effort, believes a concerted virus detection effort might be able to give three-to-five weeks advance warning of of picking out for attention any unusual a major fin outbreak in a community.

to an account to help meet Congressional office expenses or used "for any other lawful purpose." There is nothing to prevent a secator or representative from simply pocketing the money.

In almost all cases, surplus campaign contributions probably represent taxable personal income to the members of Congress who receive them. Such money is unquestionably taxable if it is used for personal purposes. If it is placed in an office account, it is taxable, but expenses charged against it are deductible as long as they represent legitimate functions of the legislator's office.

When such surplus money is transferred to another candidate as a campaign cootribution, the law is unclear, some lawyers believe that such a contribution would still be taxable for the

Women Leaders Differ With Carter On the Difficulties of Taking U.S. Jobs

By LAWRENCE VAN GELDER By LAWRENCE VAN GELDER
Is it really tougher to persuade a woman than a man to pull up stakes to go to Washiogton to accept a post in Government?
That's what President-elect Jimmy "Carter said in the days before he named Patricia Roberts Harris to be Secretary

But some women leaders and leaders of women would differ with Mr. Carter's assertion that: "Women have a much more difficult time telling the other members of the family that they're going to move to Washington than do men. And I've had several women who have expressed concern that they would like to serve io the Government, and they just couldn't split their family and their husband was not willing to move."

was not willing to move."

The feminist leader Gloria Steinem-said: "Obviously, it's true at a societal level. But it is not true at the level he level. But it is not true at the level he is speaking of. There are vast numbers of women far more qualified than the men he has already appointed, who bave been in public life for many years and bave solved those problems."

Women of achievement sufficient to render them eligible for consideration for high-level Convergent neets have for high-level Government posts have tended to solve such problems earlier in their lives. This point recurred to conversations with several Congress-women, but not all agreed that it was easier for a woman to pull up stakes. In Corporate America

"I think the President is right. Unless "I funk the President is right. Unless the woman is single, like Liz Holtzman, or divorced or widowed, she does have family obligations," said Representative Helen S. Meyner, Democrat of New Jersey and wife of former Gov. Robert 3. Meyner. "Traditionally it is the wife who moved with the husband. In proporte America, it has been tradicorporate America it has been tradi-ionally true. I think this is changing."

Agreeing basically with Mrs. Meyner, who spends her weeks in Washington and weekends in New Jersey, was the eminist leader Betty Freidan.

Mrs. Freidan, who expressed pleasure hat the President-elect bad, she said, needed women in making his appoint-nents as be had beeded other coo-

Therefore," she said of the President-elect's comment, "I think this is an incorrect emphasis."

Bella Abzug "There are many women who travel for careers."

Mrs. Aboug sold that she regarded the necessity to split oneself from one's family as "the most difficult part of the job." But she said that many men find it as difficult as do women. "It's sort of a problem of the office rather than of sex. It's not a matter whether you're a man or a woman."

Mrs. Abzug was one of the women who pointed out that the problem of jobs that call for travel had usually been met hy women of achievement long hefore they were recruited for the Government. "The fact is that there are many women in public, professional and leadership life who do travel for their careers, and their husbands either dn move with them or they work out an arrangement by which they do travel."

Representative Patricia Schroeder, Democrat of Colnrado, had a son, 6 years old, and a daughter, 2, when she years old, and a daughter, 2, when she was first elected to Congress. Her hushand was a lawyer in Denver.

"I think no ooe in the world would ever say that it is simple," she said of the problem posed by the demands of, her office. "I would also say that most of the women who are qualified have dealt with this issue all their life."

It All Worked Out'

The 36-year-old Mrs. Schroeder, who is about to begin her third term in the United States House of Representatives, said her husband James, had moved to Washington with her and took on a new job as a lawyer that enabled him to combine his interest in international affairs and the law in a way that would bave been "impossible" in Denver.
"So it all worked out," she said.
Mrs. Schroeder said she bad been so

Mrs. Schroeder said she had been so irked by Mr. Carter's perception of his difficuties in recruiting women that she had called Georgia, where an aide to Mr. Carter, whom she was unable to identify, had attempted to restrict the scope of Mr. Carter's comment to Jane Cahill Pfeiffer, a former executive of I.B.M. who declined appointment as Secretary of Commerce, citing her wish to remain with her husband and his children and coocern about the state of her health.

Another woman Representative who faced the problem of a move to Washingtoo was Margaret Reckler, Republican of Massachusetts, who has been a member of the House for 10 years. Mrs. Heckler is now 45, and her children were 9, 7 and 6 years old when she was first elected.

Stella Blum, curator of costumes at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, who sees fashion as a social statement.

A Curator's World: Where Clothing Ends And Fashion Begins

Now that the show "The Glory of Russian Costume" has settled down to a successful run at the Metropolitan Museum of Art - 27,000 people wandered through it in the first week-Stella Blum can settle back into her

"That means dealing with Seventh Avenue luminaries such as Bill Blass, Halston or Oscar de la Renta who want to check some historical data in the costume library. It means keeping orderly and accessible the collection's 25,000 articles of dress, which are arranged chronologically, geographically and by subject. It means working with design schools, visiting tour groups, theatrical designers and even authors seeking costume information for povels.

Art collectors ask her help in dating paintings—costume details are one of the most reliable methods of doing this and people often seek ber out to determine, the age or value of a family heirloom. A Subject Worthy of Research

For Mrs. Blum, curator of the museum's costume collection, and a member of its staff almost since its inception 40 years ago, is that rarity, a cos-tume scholar. She helped develop the field as ao area of serious study, and ber interest is directed to the present as well as the past.

Clothing, to ber, is as worthy of research as any other appurtenances of a civilization-its houses, its pottery, its furnishings and its art. Its concomitant, fashion, is no trival matter. "Fashion is a social agreement," she explained the other day in ber meticu-lously oeat, brilliantly lighted office bebind the Russian show. What happens in fashion is the result of a consensus of a large group of people that that is what they aspire to."

Everything affects fashioo. The current meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, with its decision to raise the price of oil, will have an influence.

"With heating and transportation more expensive," Mrs. Blum speculat-ed, "people may keep their homes at a cooler temperature and they may travel less, centeriog their lives more within their communities.

A Greater Need for Clothes

"As a result, they will need warmer cluthing, possibly clothing in layers, and they will need more clothes, since if you see the same people, you need more chaoges because you don't want your friends to see you in the same things all the time."

Mrs. Blum is also concerned with more abstract considerations.

"I would like to do some work on where clothes really start in the history of man, and where clothing ends and fashioo begins." she said. "I think these things could tell you more about the nature of mankind than many other areas of shuk." areas of study."

She leans to the idea that body coverings started as decoration, perhaps for religious purposes or for camouflage, rather than to keep warm. And she believes that "fashion warm, man's first leigure moment." born in man's first leisure moment." People, she contends, get too psychological about fashion, both in its beginning and now.

"No one seems to bring up the esthetics of it," she said. "People dress not only for sex or status but for the pure pleasure of it—they try to put themselves together because it pro-duces a thing of beauty that is satisfy-

The Russian exhibition pleases her because it is part of an exchange of art between the Soviet Union and the United States. Only reluctantly has the art world accepted clothing as part of its dominion.

The Metropolitan's costume collec-tion had its beginning in "The Museum" of Costume Art," established by Irene Lewisohn in 1937. This was the first museum devoted exclusively to costume as an art.

Uotil then, museums had collected costumes mainly for their fabrics; pricharming curiosities. Few people con-sidered clothes as important for esthet-ic and historical records: Mrs: Blum joined the museum in 1940, when it was boused in the International Building at Rockefeller Center. Mrs. Blum, who was born in Schenectady, N.Y., had recently graduated from Syracuse University, where she was and fine arts major. She had tried her hand at fashion illustrating in her senior year and won a fellowship for further study, which she could not afford to

After a few years, she left to raise a her two sons, Walter, who now is a surgeon, and Eric, who is an account ant. When she returned in 1953, the museum had already been installed atthe Metropolitan Museum, having undergone a name change to the Costume of Institute. It wasn't until 1960 that it hecame a full-fledged department of the museum Mrs. Blum became curator: in 1970. She is the first to have that

A Fashion Contest Finalist

After she had retired temporarily, Mrs. Blum studied philosophy and psy-chology at Queens College and attend-ed the New York Institute of Fine Arts, applying what she learned to costumes. And in 1948, she entered a contest for fashion design sponsored by The Chicago Tribune. She was one of the final-ists, along with George Nardiello and William R. Blass, both of whom became. known oo Seventh Avenue, the latter .: as Bill Blass.

"I like drawing clothes and studying them, but I'm not a frustrated designer," Mrs. Blum said.

"Fashion is always evolution," she said. "It never comes out of the air." A period of social crisis accelerates change. After a war, fashion usually steps back as people try to pick up the threads of their life before.

"After World War II, Christian Diora"

A More Mature Look Foreseen

In 1954, Chanel and Balenciaga picked up the threads of the modern era. Ten years later, Courreges, Mary Quant, the rise of blue jeans and the thrift shop look represented a turning against established traditions.

"We're now heading for a cleaner, more put together and more mature look," Mrs. Blum explained "More mature hecause the young kids don't have the money, so the women who support fashioo are the older ones."

Mrs. Blum discounts those who say" they don't care about fashion. "Fashion is so close to revealing a person's inner feelings about himself, and everybody seems to hate to lay claim to vanity, peopla tend to push it away," she observed. "It's really too 'close to the quick of the soul, but everybody's involved, except perhaps: the shopping bag ladies you see huddled in the street."

Jazz Guitarist Is at Hopper's With an Understated, Sensitive and Virtuosic Performance

By JOHN S. WILSON

When Jim Hall was playing with the Chico Hamilton Quintet 20 years ago, he was one of the first electric guitarists to get away from the metallic clatter that had been building for 15 years among guitarists who were trying to outplay Charlie Christian. Mr. Hall had roots in Mr. Christiao's playing, but he also had a feeling for dynamics, for structure, for tone, for phrsing. Since then he has remained in the forefront of the growing number of guitarists who place seositivity on at least ists who place seositivity on at least ao equal plane with virtuosity.

Benny Aronov, his pianist, creates fascinating reflections of Mr. Hall's varying moods—sometimes running long lines that rise end glide like a bird on the wing, at other times playing behind the beat to nudge it along with gentle persuasion or, on Scrany Rollins's "St. Thomas," boiling up in a burst of energy to match Mr. Hall's gaily dancing chorded passages.

The Screen: 'Voyage of the Dammed'

By VINCENT CANBY

In May 1939 the Hamburg-America liner St. Louis sailed from Hamburg headed for Havana, car-rying 937 Jews who bad paid Hitrying 937 Jews who bad paid Hitler's government dearly in the bope of finding refuge from the Nazis in Cuba. Hitler's strategy was simple: if, indeed, the Cuban Government accepted the refugees (and there was doubt about that, even when they sailed), then Germany was well rid of them and a little bit richer, too.
If Cuba did not accept them, and if the United States and other countries followed suit, then Hitler would have proven his point that would have proven his point that Jews were unwanted by the very countries that were so loudly criticizing his anti-Semitic policies while proclaiming their own hu-manitarian principles.

The story of that voyage is a harrowing footnote to the history of World War II. As carefully researched by Gordon Thomas and Max Morgan Witts in their book Voyage of the Danmed," it is, further, a revealing commentary on how opportunism could dictate policies of friendly governments, including that of the United States.

Faye Dunaway, above, and Lee Grant Cast in a movie that is worse than merely boring.

It also seems to be excellent source material for a film, though you'd never know it from the alteryou'd never know it from the alternately sluggish and hysterical movie that opened at three New York theaters yesterday. Stuart Rosenberg, tha director, and Steven Shagan and David Butler, who wrote the screenplay, appear to have been attracted to tha project because of the almost limitless ways in which they could make history look like a bed, ally star movie, to start with they use a dozen or so too many stories eveo to fit conveniently into a running time inflated to 155 minutes.

Their touch is sentimely band, that they turn potentially moving episodes into second-rate melodrama, while adding some third-rate melodramatics of them town, including a Romeo and dullet strickle pact. It's the kind of movie the which someone says, quite seriouswhich someone says, quite seriously, "Vee Chermans har hallways hon time" (We Germans are always on time).

The cast includes good actors and bad, but even the good actors are inclined to be awful. Faye Dunaway and Oskar Werner are all right as a rather posh Berlin doctor and his wife who are carrying their marital problems into exile intact. They travel first-class. Malcolm McDowell plays the role of a cabin boy who appears to be old enough to qualify for Social Security. When we weren't looking, his youth fled, Max you Sytow survives with his reputation undanaged as the liner's bumane skipper but Katharine Ross, who looks like a Rose Bowl parade queen, is a joke as a humane Havana whore.

Orson Welles, James Mason, Denholm Elliott and Jose Ferrer

are on and off faster than it takes to type this sentence, while Lee Grant, Julie Harris, Wendy Hiller and Luther Adler might wish they bad been so lucky.

Movies as clumsy, tasteless and self-righteous as this are worse than merely boring. By expliciting the tragedies of real people, some wildly fictionalized, "The Voyage of the Damned" attempts to turn them to profit without giving them any measure of the respect that is due.

"Voyage of The Damned," which has been rated PG ("parental glid-ance suggested", contains nothing of an even mildly suggestive na-ture except the title, which might mislead children to think they are a child who wants to see a disaster film and sees this, instead, will be an angry child.

Crime Film 'Enforcer' Lacking Ideas

By RICHARD EDER

There's a basic weakness in the movie business' assumption that if you bave a big suspense or actioo picture with lots of movement and thrills, you don't oeed writing or acting or character in It.

Because what happens? The climax comes. Good and bad are stalking each other around some monstrous bangar, Zoroastrian rest-home or abandoned maple-sugar factory. Music. Suspenseful lighting. Tension. And a face peers around the corner. But by this time, who cares about the face? It might as well be Dornid Duck's.

Money, the big name of Clint Eastwood, a lot of gore and howing sirens and the urge to rail at various liberal notions are not enough to make even a passable movie out of "The Enforcer."

The movie, which opened yester-day at the Criterion and other theaters, is the third in the series— "Dirty Harry" and "Magnum Force" were tha first two—about a mean though righteous San Francisco cop. It has been billed as "the dirtiest Harry of them all," but it is simply the surliest. It is the same barroom drunk railing at weirdos and pinkos, and four or five glasses farther into his theme.

The movie begins with the killing of two gas-company drivers by the Revolutionary Strike Force. The half-dozen young people in the force need the gas truck to break into an arms depot guarded by one
(1) old watchman. They kill him these days—enough to sell out his and use the arms and detonators to kidnap the mayor, whom they hold for ransom. The killings are unnecessary, but this is explained by the fact that the leader—who is really in it for the mooey—is a homicidal madman. We know this because his jaws quiver when he stabs people. Out comes Harry Callahan (Mr.

Eastwood) of the homicide divi-sion. That is, he's sometimes of the homicide division. He starts out by driving his car through the win-dow of a liquor store to break up a stickup and kills the three gunmen. He is husted to personnel for roughness, reinstated when the Revolutionary Strike Force begins work, is busted again wheo he goes after them too vigorously, but manages to get them all anyway when they hole up in what used to be Alcatraz prison.

The action is reasonably fast and competeotly photographed. The picture doesn't exactly drag. But it is maggoty with oon-ideas. These non-ideas come in the form of a whole gallery of corrupt or foolish liberal types who interfere with Harry's mission.

There is a progressive priest who shelters the assault gang until one of them, dressed as a oun, tries to shoot Harry. There is a weaselly police captain who says Harry's shooting the liquor-store holdup men was offensive to the city's mi-norities. "The hoods, you mean," Harry says brightly. "They're Americans, too," the captain an-

That—the movie tells us—is how knee-jerk liberals think. The politicians are corrupt and pathetically eager to appease the thugs/radicals/ pornographers.

Feminism is also some kind of conspiracy. Harry is reluctantly saddled with a woman police officer as bis partner. Played by Tyne Daly, who is good-hearted and

JOSEPH AND THE AL

HE CLUB

In a perfectly restored mansion, circa 1806, on 36 landscaped acres overlooking the Hudson. Inside, elegant architecture surrounds priceless antique furnishings, rare books. Arranged just as they were when the Dyckman family were its occupants so very long ago.

Bring someone you love to Boscobel this Holi-day Season for one of our traditional candlelight tours. From December 26th to 28th, our well-versed host-sees will take you back through two centuries to explain and recreate the lifestyle of post-Revolutionary America. From one exquisite room to another, the soft glow of ember light warms' polished woods. Reflects in silver and mirrors.

Sparkles in crystal. You'll sip mulled cider served with spley fruit cake. Listen to music of the period by guest musicians. And share a lovely experience. At Boscobel. Where tradition has been so thoughtfully preserved.

Boscobel is easy to reach, eight miles north of Bear Mouotain Bridge on Rte. 9D. Opco daily except Tuesday from 9:30 to 4 p.m. Admission for candlelight tours: adults $2.00, children $1.00. Callifor information (914) CO 5-3633, or in N.Y. City

The joyous sound of gospel singing filled the Lyceum Theater last night, and should be filling it for some time to come. It was the opening of Vinnette Carroll's "Your Arms Too Short to Box With God," and it is a black celebration according to the Book of

Miss Carvoll earlier conceived the long-running musical "Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope," and something of the same energy runs through this present show. But "Your Arms Too Short" has more spirit, more sense of exaltation. It is funny and fervent—an unusual combination—and it has an onrushing vitality that practically pins you to

The musical is set in a chapel, it is very simple — stylized stained glass windows at the back, arches, seats at the side, the faint suggestion of an altar. The cast enter dressed in red and cream robes that look vagury litur-gical. They are led by a minister, in a longer robe, who announces that "Wo Are Going to Have a Good Time," and he is going to tell a story about a man who lived nearly 2,000 years ago.

What follows is the Christ story from Palm Sunday, through the Passion in the Garden, the Betrayal, the Trial, to the Crucifixion and the Resurrection. The story is acted out by, as it were, the congregation who exchange their original robes for biblical garb, and become followers. Pharisees, and the ordinary people of Jerusalem. There is plenty of reverence in the piece, but also an abundance of cheerful folk humor. There are as many rogues as saints in this story, probably more. To an extent the musical may be compared with that so-cailed rocknpera "Jesus Christ Superstar," and some of the elements are indeed similar.

But the effect is totally different. In the first place gospel singing, with all lts musical riches, is peculiarly appropriate here, and whereas the flashy Broadway musical was all trash and glitter Miss Carroll has given here proviglitter, Miss Carroll has given her work something of the emblematic simplicity of a medieval murality play.

After the story and the transfiguration of Christ, the company resume

Mozart Given Due By Greenwich House

By PETER G. DAVIS The Greenwich House Orchestra traveled uptown from its bome at the Greenwich House Music School nn Barrow Street Monday night for a con-cert at Carnegie Recital Hall. The music was by Mnzart and the orcbestra made the visit more than worthwhile by playing every item on the program with crackling vitality and polished technical precision under the expert direction of its conductor, Michael Bartos.

Their overall sound was consistedly smooth, full-bodied and everyly believed.

bodied and evenly balanced.

Benjamin Hudson, a violinist on the school's faculty, was the soloist in the concerto. His reading like that of the orchestra's, was neatly boned, warmly committed and alert to every expressive turn in the music. In the olotet, Patricia Ernest tossed off the coloraa sweet, securely positioned soprano.

Aside from the geoeral technical ex-cellence of the performers, they exuded an agreeably infectious spirit; obvi-ously the players were enjoying them-selves every bit as much as the audi-

their chapel robes, and sing of the glory

I first saw "Your Arms Too Short to Box With God" in a slightly different version in a Renaissance chapel in Spo-leto, Italy. Miss Carroll had developed the show with her Urban Arts Corps for the 197S Spoletn Festival. It was a festive occasion then and in the present version, produced originally by the Ford's Theater in Washignton, it is a festive occasion now.

Part of the show's infectious happiness derives from the music. The early music and lyrics were then all—if memory serves—by Alex Bradford, who was also the lead singer. Now these have been supplemented with additional music and lyrics by Micki Grant. They all meld together so smoothly that I would challenge anyone to say which was which. Another very strong aspect of the evening is the choreography by Talley Beatty.

The whole cast is as lively as a revival meeting that has just revived. There is some great singing and acting—for here the two are one and the same—in this lovely show, I have to same—in this lovely show, I have to mentinn Delores Hall, who stops the show with "I Love You So Much Jesus," and is tremendous throughout. But all the nthers, including Salome Bey, Sheila Ellis, William Hardy Jr. (whose voice has the most surprising and beautiful range) and Clinton Derricks-Carroll, who brings an impressive, somewhat sardonic presence to the Minister, are just fine.

Miss Carroll has directed the show with both speed and fluidity, so that it seems as much a ritual as anything else, and the simple setting and imaginative costumes by William Schroder add to the general effect, as does the lighting by Gilbert V. Hamsley Jr.

The result is a surge of gospel, of music, faith, passioo and love. Never forgetting a little ironic humor on the way. Go and see it. You may not be converted but you should be generated but you

Music and Films by Phil Niblock

Phill Niblock's music and films are concerned with detail and simplicity. In the music, adjacent tones are amplified and extended in time, so that the acoustical phenomennn of their beat frequencies, beard as a kind of pulsing nr flutter, captures the attention. In the films, farmers work their land, suns rise and set, Mexican Indians weave and harvest and wash their cluthes in rivers, and bees dance atop flowers. The pace of the images seems to move in rhythmic cycles, and again a pulsing phenomeooo becomes the focus of attention.

On Tuesday, Mr. Niblock presented four hours of music and film "for the first day of winter" at his Experimental Intermedia Fnundation, 224 Centre Street. The music and the film images pulsed at their own pace, and nn attempt was made to synchronize the

Sparks Band Now Hard-Rocking

The Mael hrothers, who are the basis . of a band called Sparks, are not trying to hide their current shift of direction. The band first emerged a couple of years ago as ooe of the cleverest, most febrile of all the British progressive rock bands (even though Ron and Rus-sell Mael come from Los Angeles).

The nriginal Sparks was genuinely a lever outlit, but it manic brittleness and near-bysterin could never assure the brothers of more than a novelty success. In addition, the group's stage shows were real charmers, built around the clever contrast between Russell's cute, boyish pop-star cavortings and Ron's sly, emaciated, Hitler-Chaplin

Amor Artis Presents Vivaldi With Verve

By RAYMOND ERICSON . If nothing else, Vivaldi's music has an energy and momentum that give it a lively, celebratory air: It made the program that was devoted to the composer's works in Alice Tuliy Hall on Monday night decidedly festive and suitable to the Advent season. It was given by the Amor Artis Chorale and Orchestra, under the direction of Johannes Somary, and it was the first of threa they will present in the ball

The concert was neatly belanced be-tween three concertos and three choral works. The Concerto in C for Twn Trumpets and the Concerto in A minor for Piccolo Recorder provided brilliant for Picculo Recorder provided brilliant virtuoso roles for instrumentalists who took full advantage of them: Martin Berinbaum and his colleague, Edward Carroll, on trumpets, and Daniel Waitzman on the recorder. (The indispensable Mr. Berinbaum left after his number, tha first of the evening, and dashed to the adjacent Avery Fisher Hall to take part in a "Messiah" performance there.) Mr. Waitzman's facility with what sounds like a penny whistle was nothing short of miraculous.

The Concerto in G minor ("For the

The Concerto in G minor ("For the Dresden Orchestra"), with its poignant oboe and bassoon duet in the slow movement, was also played. The familiar "Gloria," an infrequently heard "Lauda Jerusalem" and "Dixit Dominus" were the choral entries. The last, scored for five soloists, two choruses and twn orchestras, has some unusual writing for the choruses as well as writing for the choruses, as well as a splendid duet for two sopranos, and some fine effects for the instrumental ensembles.

Mr. Somary conducted stylish and stylistically right performances, and his various forces sang and played very well. There was an occasional faltering in the orchestra or a weakly sung line in the chorus, hut nn the whole the work was shipshape. Jane Gunter and Peggy Pruett were the two excellent soprano soloists, and Jeffrey Doo-ley was the skiliful alto soloist. Doug-las Perry, tenor, and Richard Eikenber-ry, bass-baritone, handled their small assignments smoothly.

HEARINGS ARE BEGUN IN PSYCHIATRIST CASE

Professional Conduct at Issue as a Medical Panel Considers Whether to Revoke His License

By LAURIE JOHNSTON Hearings oo the revocation of the medical licenseof Dr. Martin Shepard, a psychiatrist whose books include "Games Analysts Plays" and "The Love Treat-ment," were begun yesterday by the State Board for Medicine's committee on proessional conduct.

One charge is that Dr. Shepard, according to his 1972 book, "A Psychiatrist's Head," had sexual intercourse with one or more of his patients. The second charge is that, even if the book were "a work of fiction," Dr. Shepard's claim of sexual relations as a part of treatment brought "disrepute and ridicule" to the medical profession and to psychiatry in

In an interview before the hearing, the 42-year-old Dr. Shepard called the language of the charges "a 'Catch-22'they're saying, 'If it's true, you won't be allowed to practice and if it's fiction, you won't be allowed to practice." book, Dr. Shephard said, was "about a summer of sexual exploration and my own erotic life." Some of those whn "helped with the book," be said, were from Anthos encounter groups he had conducted. "I was sleeping with a lot of people." Dr. Shepard told the interviewer, "but I didn't consider them patients."

He said his swansong to psychiatric practice had been "The Do-it-Ynurself Psychotherapy Book," published in 1973, and that he now considered himself a

Debate Over Press Admission

As witnesses for the bearing, Dr. Shepard had assembled nearly 20 friends, expatients and associates, including Dean William T. Burke of Southampton College, where Dr. Shepard's latest course is on "Deafh." Most of the witnesses were unheard when the hearing was adjuurned to Feb. 18 after the five-physician panel had debated lengthily over whether to exclude the press. exclude the press.

This is done customarily in professional-conduct hearings to protect the accused, but Dr. Shepard had waived the right in favor of an apening bearing. The panel, which included one psychiatrist, voted unanimnusly not to admit the press.

Dr. Shepard, a former resident of Nyack, N.Y., appeared with his wife, the former Judy Kercheval, an actress. The couple now live in Sagaponack, East Hampton, with two children of each by former marriages.

Investigation Agency Bids Governor Remove Sheriff In Dutchess Ticket-Fixing

ALBANY, Dec. 22 (AP)-Th New York State Commission of Investigation has recommended the dismissal of the Dutchess County sheriff, Lawrence Quinlan, fnllawing testimony by sheriff's deputies that he had criminal cases dismissed and traffic tickets fixed for "political and personal mntives." In a letter to Governor Carey, the com-missinn chairman, David W. Brown, asked the Governor tn act-swiftly and dismiss Sheriff Quinlan, who has been sheriff fur 16 years. Sheriff Quinlan was recently removed from his job as jail administrator after a Federal judge ruled that he had violated a court nrder to improve conditions at the facility. How-ever, he was allowed to continue as sherthe Governor had no immediate comment.

The state has been investigating Mr.
Quinlan's supervision of the county facility for mnra than a year.

Letter Cites Testimony

Action in the Afternoon

By FRANCIS X. CLINES

It is midday in Manhattan, and a new shooter emerges among the group of businessmen at the craps table, a man with a little checked fedora who. nervously shifts his cigar from one sideof his mouth to the other and ruffles a stack of $25 chips.

It is illegal, of course, but the Garment Center Jewish Congregation needs funds, and so invites the public in every Thursday to gamble—for money, the best-known variation of mammon's theme-in a hall at 40th Street and Seventh Avenue known, appropriately enough, as the Brotherhood in Action building. It is happening again today, far from Reno and Atlantic City, right here in a city as officially innocent as Grouper Careers. innocent as Grovers Corners.

"Coming out!" shouts the craps bank-er to the other bettors as tho mao with a fedora throws the dice down the table and rolls a double three. "Mark the six!" says the banker, emphasizing for side bettors the numerical point that the man with fedora needs next to win. He rolls a seven, a natural loser, and he groans and throws his cigar away as if it is as stale as the dice.

Because of the mortgage, it is not Because of the mortgage, it is not eanugh to worship at the center. Mnney must be raised, and the traditional gambits dn not work well.

In the city, the official gambling czar will be a czarina, Elinor Guggenheimer, Commissioner of Consumer Affairs. She says she has been hearing of some scarey angles that may be attempted, such as reports of "born again" professional gamblers already initing churches and temples because the new law tolerates only religious amateurs running the tables, and no nutside professionals.

Her inspectors will try tn spot that, she promises, but there are a number of other aspects of the law that trouble her and the charity and religious nrganizatioos that want to sponsor profitable games under the new law. For example, ooce the law is in effect, there will be a limit of $1,000 as the largest amount in total payoffs that any one type of game can make in the course of a day or ovening no matter how many tables feature that game.

Bridge: Individual Competition Sho A Mild Increase in Populari

By ALAN TRUSCOTT

The individual championship, the The individual championship, the Cinderella of tournament play, may be on its way to a mild renaissance. At the New York Hilton Hotel last Friday, there were 104 contestants in the reginnal individual, organized in parallel with the mixed pairs.

There certainly will be a big field in the Boston individual, scheduled at the beginning of January. And the Blue Ribbon individual, the latest addition to the New York calendar, is arousing considerable interest here.

When play begins at the Manhattan Club, 228 West 71st Street, on Feb. 4, 36 top-ranked experts will battle through four sessions, playing three deals with each of the others. Most of the players will have qualified thanks to their performances in New York tournaments in 1976. Some have already qualified as former internationalists.

Some Experts Unavailable

Most of the experts with automatic eligibility who are still active in the game have accepted invitations to play, but there will be some absences for purely geographic reasons. Lee Hazen will be in Florida, Howard Schenken in California, Bill Grieve in Europe, and B. Jay Becker somewhere in the South Atlantic lecturing aboard the S.S. Rotterdam

The absence of Becker is unfortunate.

The absence of Becker is unfortunate, since he is one of the only two living players who are two-time winners of the old masters individual, a highly prestigious event in the 30's and 40's. The other is Morrie Elis, who has accepted a special invitation to compete. The honor of the Becker family will be upheld in the individual by B. Jay's son Michael, who faced difficult problems on the diagramed deal from the open pairs final played here last Saturday. He sat South, and arrived in three no-trump after his partner had responded in diamonds and then jumped in that suit. This jump was clearly forcing, but some partnerships would consider it no more than invitational.

Moreover, Miss Weldon offers at least some sort of literal explanation for Madeleine's posthumous power to make trouble for flose who survive her: "Some spurt of power coming from God knows where ... provided more than enough energy to transcend a perfectly commonplace death." The combination of our lack of sympathy for Madeleine and our incredulity at this "spurt of power from God knows where" is sufficient to undermine all the many intelligent things that Miss Weldon has done in "Remember Me," and makes us take it less than completely seriously.

More Repressed Rage

The rage is more repressed in Marga-ret Atwood's "Lady Oracle," the third novel by a Canadian writer who has published seven volumes of poetry, as well as an earlier novel; "Surfacing," that generated considerable power until it fell apart at the end. Repressed rage it fell apart at the end. Repressed rage prompts Josa Foster to eat compulsively and grow hugely fat in response to her mother's seeming lack of love for her. It fractures her self-awareness, forcing her to lead a triple life as the docile wife of a young Canadian radical, the mistress of the "con-create" poet who calls himself "the Royal Porcupine," and the secret author not only of successful costume Gothics, but also pine," and the secret author not only of successful costume Gothics, but also of a best-selling book of automatic writing called "Lady Oracle." And it eventually leads Joan to fake her own death and flee to a town outside of Rome, which is where we find her hiding at the beginning of the novel, about to relate the story of how she got there.

Indeed, repressed tage may even acto relate the story of how she got there.

Indeed, repressed rage may even account for why Joan tells her story so entertainingly, for sublimation of anger is as good an explanation as any for the wiyness of Joan's view of herself and the energy of her satire.

Unhappity, Miss Atwood, like Miss Weldon, depends to a degree on the realism of her plot, and it is here that her book turns sour. In order for us her book turns sour. In order for us to understand why Joan must fake her own death, we have to sympathize with her fear that her husband will find out what her childhood was like. But Joan has described this childhood so amustant with the childhoo ingly that it is impossible for us to share her view of it as a fearful secret. R is as if only she can perceive the extreme degree of her rage; thus, only she can fear the consequences of its bursting out. As a result, half the plot of "Lady Oracle" finally comes to seem

Of course, as I've said, it may be that this sort of rage requires no motive or elaboration; it may be recognizable to all but me as a condition of contemporary life amounting almost to a sex-linked characteristic. Still, in reeding both these povels, I failed to understand it. So I must regard both these authors as having failed to properly explain it.

The Argo Merchant Disaster

The "biggest oil spill disaster on the American coast in our history" is the way Russell E. Train, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, has characterized the wreck of the tanker Argo Merchant nn the Nantucket shoals. Mr. Train, who is not given to overstatement, was describing the impact of this wholly preventable catastrophe that threatens incalculable damage to the great fisheries on the Georges Bank and to New England's coastal environment.

'As in the case of the famous Santa Barbara and Torrey Canyon spills of the 1960's, this one, too, may serve a useful purpose if it galvanizes the public - and governmental authority-into action that will reduce the likelihood of auch disasters In the years ahead. Unless atrong action is taken, accidents are not only probable; they are virtually certain.

The Georges Bank, besides being one of the world'a most important fishing grounds, is also the site of prospective leases on the Outer Continental Shelf, from which it is estimated that some 180,000 barrels of oll a day will be extracted at maximum production. Under present plans, this oil is to be carried by tanker from the offshore wells-thus greatly increasing the tanker traffic in the area and, with it, the probability of similar wrecks -and snills.

The far safer method of removing the oil would be by pipeline running ashore from the well heads. It is not a method that commends itself to the oil companies because the relatively low yield of oil expected might not economically warrant the additional cost. But if the site is considered that minimally productive, why drill there

The affair of the Argo Merchant raises several other questions that need thorough study before offshore drilling in the Atlantic becomes a fixed procedure. The ship. which had an appalling history of previous accidents, was so far off course that knowing observers in the area wooder whether its skipper was not deliberately taking a short cut in order to trim costs, a practice they suggest is not uncommon. If so, why bas it been allowed? It is fair to ask, too, whether the Coast Guard is as powerless as it appears to be to contain oil spilled in the rough Atlantic. If it is, that is additional testimony against offshore drilling in those waters. In additioo, the ship's record raises serious questions about the policing of all tanker operations, apart from the offshore drilling issoe.

The fishermen of the Georges Bank will be fortunate if the spill from the Argo Merchant does not do longterm damage to the spawning grounds on which their industry depends. The people of the coastal area will be fortunate if a sudden shift in the tides does not bring disaster to their great resorts. Along the rest of the Atlantic Coast, residents will be fortunate if the lessons of the Argo Merchant are not lost on those who have the responsibility of deciding whether or not offshore oil is worth the possible price.

Police 'Victory'

The Appeals Court ruling exempting policemen from the municipal pay freeze is a Pyrrhic victory which a large number of employed policemen may soon regret. In addition to adding a $19.5 million burden to the already strained budget, the ruling threatens to undermine delicate understandings and negotiations with other municipal employees that are essential components of New York's long-term effort to regain a viable, balanced budget. In order to preserve his budget and his credibility with other municipal unions, the Mayor would appear to have two options:

• The city might ask the State Legislature to rewrite the wage-freeze law so that it will apply to the police without question—a solution that was indirectly suggested when the court noted a deficiency in the law as

• The city could squeeze the lost $19.5 million from the Police Department in other ways, by refusing to grant new cost-of-living adjustments or through additional layoffs of as many as 800 policemen.

Almost as disturbing as the ruling itself is a report that the court withheld its decision for weeks at the request of the city and the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, who were attempting to negotiate a solution. It is not surprising that a settlement was not achieved under such circumstances, with the union leaders aware. all along that they had this ace up their aleeves.

Unfortunate as the court's decision Is, it is better that it is now out in the open rather than remaining a hidden factor in the negotiations. In the end, it cannot change the fiscal realities which the policemen still must accept and adjust to, as most of their fellow municipal employees already have done.

Crown Heights Divided?

Given the potential for conflict, there has been remarkably little dispute over proposed lines for the new, Charter-mandated coterminous service districts which are designed to give local communities throughout the city greater control over municipal services and policies affecting their neighborhoods.

Much of the credit is due the City Planning Commission; which drew the new lines with painstaking care to insure that they conformed as far as possible to historic neighborhoods, as called for in last year's Charter revision. Most of the modifications by the Mayor of the original plan have been in the direction of strengthening this commitment to traditional neighborhoods as represented by existing community boards.

An effort to upset this prudent policy has been launched, however, by Hasidic Jews in Brooklyn who are demanding that the Crown Heights District, which remains virtually intact under the plan, he divided in two in order to give them a larger voice in the southern half where many of them live. The demand led to an angry confrontation between the Hasidim and blacks, who are a majority in both halves of the district, at a recent Board of Estimate hearing.

It would clearly be wrong for the board to bow to any effort to divide the city along racial or other narrow group lines, a potential pitfall of decentralization which so far has been carefully avoided. If New York is to survive as a cosmopolitan city, its heterogeneous people must learn to live and work together in their local neighborhoods as well as in the larger metropolis. Dividing Crown Heights would be good neither for Crown Heights nor for New York.

New York City Transit: Of Fares and Heat

A recent article in The Times described the financial tribulations of the Metropolitan Transportation Authority in considerable detail. Nowhere, however, was mention made of significant savings in operational costs which might result from improved methods of fare collection such as currently in use in the BART system in San Francisco, or contemplated by MARTA in Atlanta, and by other major systems throughout the world.

These methods generally employ some form of encoded card or ticket and a readout device located in the turnstile which interprets the encoded. information. A proposal for evaluating an electronic fare collection technique was under consideration by the M.T.A. about a year ago, but no action has subsequently been taken on this mat-

In the present context, it is important to understand that electronic fare collection enables easy determination to be made of the number of fares collected from special groups such as senior citizens and schoolchildren from which special subsidies are available from the Federal Government. These subsidies can only be paid on the basis of accurate and validated data.

Electronic fare collection simplifies. the mechanics of transfer ticketing and multi-ride nr combination discounting. Unlike tokens and magnetically encoded cards, the electronically encoded tickets cannot be counterfeited or altered.

The cost of fare collection is thought to be about 30 cents for each dollar of revenue. The proposed system would reduce this cost to 5 cents. It is estimated that this reduction, together with the savings in theft of services and the elimination of the need for pass gates to accommodate

Plastic Litter and the Environment

To the Editor:

Your Nov. 26 editorial "Plastic Litincludes several misstatements and erroneous conclusions regarding prospective environmental impact of the new plastic soft drink containers, and so does a disservice to those wishing to understand this complex

For example, you quote the Food and Drug Administration as saying that "plastic containers would cause even more solid waste pollution than glass containers." To the contrary, the September 1976 Environmental Impact Statement of that ageocy states firmly that "there is no confirming evidence that plastic beverage containers will be more or less of a litter problem than other throw-aways."

In fact, the litter potential of these new packages is negligible. Beverage-related items found in litter are almost always single-service containers used and discarded away from home. The plastic bottles being introduced come in one quart and larger multiple serving sizes intended primarily for in-home use. The new containers will for the most part replace other types of nonrefiliable containers of sunilar size already in use.

In addition, the F.D.A.'s En mental Impact Statement conthat plastic containers use less energy than any other form of refillable container, and that i larger sizes they are competitive: refiliable glass containers in th' spect as well. Our concern here goes beyoo realized many of the dreams along the way, and, I hope, in the process have helped in some small way to improve for all the order of life in our country.

I have been luckier than most who will come here, and I have known a more varied career than many will ever experience. I have had the chance to serve with the best blue-ribbon talents of this Republican Administration, and at a time when they were performing at their best.

In turn, I have served as assistant to George Bush when he was Congressman from Texas, United States Ambassador to the United Nations, and chairman of the Republican National Committee. Under President Ford's Administration, I served as assistant to Dean Burch as counselor to the President, to Donald Rumsfeld as assistant to the President, to Richard Cheney as assistant to the President.

My good fortune was to serve with men of high quality—unswerving and untiring in their diligence, yet each imposing honesty as an overlay to any action. Each of them inculcated in me a burning desire to succeed, but never for the sake of expediency. They asked for my judgments, for my noes when I thought I was right, rather than the ever-ready yeses with which the town always seems awash.

I often long for the illusion I came here following. It has gradually disappeared for me over the years, hut I still catch enough of an occasional glimmer to spur me on. I am much richer in experience, if somehow thinner in spirit.

I have observed men at the highest levels soar beyond their own expectations and, in turn, I have known of some who grovel so as to sicken even the toughest among us.

I have known power to corrupt, and I have seen it inspire. I have known heady victories, and I have been stung by cutting defeats.

Still, baving seen all this, I opt for more. Quit politics, some say; retire to the corporate business life and triple your income. To do so would be to betray myself. Retire to what? When you have been in the thick of the action, the sidelines, no matter what their allure, seem an impossible choice.

So bere's to you—Jody and Hamilton and Jack and Greg—you and all the other new boys in town. All of you who are about to plunge into what Teddy Roosevelt so aptly dubbed "the arena"—enjoy it to the hilt—these may be the best years of your life, and maybe from time to time think about these reflections of one who shared the common condition.

Peter Roussel was, most recently, assistant to James A. Baker 3d, campaign director of the President Ford Committee.

Watch What We Do

By William Safire

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22. The googoos are in an uproar about Jimmy Carter's cunning selection of Griffin Bell to be Attorney General. They accuse Mr. Carter's friend of being a liar, a bigot, a betrayal, and a throwback to those days when the Department of Justice was under tha thumb of the White House. Let's take those charges in order.

I. An Attorney General-designate should not shade the truth in his first public appearance. The goo-goos have a point bere.

When Mr. Bell claimed he had not "endorsed" Harrold Carswell for the Supreme Court, he was being deceptive. Worse, Mr. Carter's choice for chief law-enforcement officer tried to wriggle off the hook by claiming he had not known of Judge Carswell's early speeches. It can be easily shown that he wrote his endorsement nearly a week after Mr. Carswell's racist quotations were widely publicized.

Mr. Bell cannot perjure himself before the Senate. He will have to change his story, apologize for his attempt at deception—call it a lapse of memory —and he will be forgiven.

2. A public official's membership in a private club that discriminates on the basis of race or religion condones higotry. Score another point for the goo-goos. Mr. Carter might have heen able to defend Mr. Bell's clubbiness on the basis of a private individual's freedom to choose his friends, but he would have had trouble with Mr. Bell'a lilywhite membership all during the years he was a Rederal judge deciding civil rights cases.

Rather than fight this losing battle, Mr. Bell bas just said he will resign his membership in white-only, no-Jews-allowed organizations. His original position—that be would ask for a leave of absence so he could rejoin later without losing his $10,000 in initiation fees—was untenable, as it would have put the seal of Carter Administration approval on discrimination.

 Going along with Senator James Eastland's choica for Attorney General is a Cartér betrayal of black support.

Now the goo-goos go too far. Why is paying off Jim Eastland for his support any different from paying off black groups for their support? The blacks have received their window dressing already—Andrew Young will eojoy serving at the U.N. and Patricia Harris cannot get into trouble learning about bousing—so why not give one plum to the anti-integration Southerners who also rallied to the Carter cause? Fair's fair, if you are a popularist unburdened by principles.

4. The appointment of a political crony and fund-raiser as Attorney General, rather than an independent symbol of integrity, is a throwback and invites toleration of abuses of White House power that took place under Mitchell, Clark, Katzenbach and Robert Kennedy.

Robert Kennedy.

The goo-goos just do not understand the name of the game. An "independent" Justice Department is a dagger pointed at the heart of executive authority.

Consider our last two Attorneys General, heavily bedecked in postWatergate rectitude. William Saxbe's independence was a function of being indiscreet, confirmable, and intellectually out to lunch.

Edward Levi, on the other hand, was high-minded and truly independent. He did not risk anything that could be criticized as helping President Ford. Accordingly, when a false accusation was made against the President during the election campaign, the Department of Justice did not routinely investigate the matter, letting possible prosecution be decided by normal standards.

On the contrary, Mr. Levi passed the false charge along to the Special Prosecutor, whom he had kept in business purely to insulate the Attorney General from having to make difficult judgment calls on controversial charges. This special treatment guaranteed a news play that made Mr. Ford look like a soon-to-be-indicted criminal for over a month during the campaign, and bad much to do with his loss. The defeated President is left to finger old editorials praising his choice of an "independent" Attorney General.

The next President wants an Attorney General who is on his side. Not one to obstruct justice, but one who is "compatible"—who will rarely bring pressure on the White House for civil-rights policies that upset the Carter middle-American Southern constituency, and will display no excess of zeal in the investigation of David Rabhan's Carter connection, Tip O'Neill's Korean connection, and other potential Democratic embergassments.

By that standard, the tolling of Griffin Bell makes excellent political sense. The outrage of tha goo-goos will only endear the new Administration to center-right Democrats who nominated Jimmy Carter in the first place.

Mr. Bell's nomination rates a spirited (if left-handed) defense in this space because it dashes the ice water of political reality in the face of dreamers, and reminds us all that the days of the gentle caretaker will soon be gone. The vaunted "selection process" never applied to the positions that counted most: Like President Kennedy and Nixon, Mr. Carter knows exactly where the power is, and wants a man in control of criminal prosecutions who has long been personally loyal to him.

WASHINGTON - Once again, the burden of a national election has passed over the country. The results are now felt everywhere. By glimpses, we see the dreams of the winners beginning to take on the hard test of reality, and the defeated dismissed from service almost overnight. For, in the ebb and flow of Washington power struggles, there is barely room for success, and

I envy the newcomers. In the giddi-ness of their spirit, I see myself as I was when I first came to this city eight years ago, when the country's leadership was again being renewed.

Into the process this time are streaming thousands of young men and women who are, as I was then, filled with idealism, motivations and ambitions, many of which are not fully understood.

What has drawn all these young people to political Mecca? If it be idealism, at what point does one finally and reluctantly determine that idealism is virtually meaningless in the maw of Washington power politics? If it be raw ambition, at what point does one decide to give in under the relentless crush of competition and say: "It's not worth it. There is something else

I would rather be doing with my life."

Over and over in the mind, that venerable truism surfaces: "What price glory?" I have asked myself these questions for the last few years. No answer I have found has been compelling enough to make me want to

I was a young man drawn to the political life here with the same hones and dreams of glory we now see reflected in the faces of those pouring

WASHINGTON—Recently, a number of enlightened voices have urged bigger food programs for underdeveloped countries in order to avoid great suffering. This is tha only decent thing to do, and of course food aid is consistent with our finest traditions. However, unless the character of our foreign-aid programs is recast, putting more emphasis on population growth rate reduction, any suffering we prevent today will be compounded many times a generation hence.

I just completed a trip to Africa, under State Department auspices, to study population growth problems and family-planning progress in Kenya, Tanzania, Zaire, Nigeria, Ghana, Ivory Coast and Senegal. Most of sub-Saharan Africa has a population growth rate of about 3 percent. In approximately twenty years, each country's population will have doubled.

It is highly unlikely that within twenty years food production can be doubled. In most countries, food is desperately inadequate for people now alive; it needs doubling for them. Then double it again for the twice-as-large population pouring forth? It probably can't be done, even with vast infusions of capital from developed countries, were they willing to contribute at this enormously increased level.

Resources divided by people equals individual standards of living. Resources include available health services, educational opportunities and other buman services affecting the quality of individual life.

Even if all the bravely progressing African nations did accomplish the well-nigh impossible and double these services over the next two decades, they would still be providing only the miserably inadequate current level of services, because all of the herculean efforts would merely have kept up with relentless population growth, drowning all development in a flood of people.

The Congress has appropriated about 15 times more funds for mortality reduction (food and nutrition programs, curative and preventive health services, etc.) than for family-planning and other population-growth-slowing programs.

We are destroying oature's balance. Earlier, population was effectively curbed through 50 percent infant mortality, frequent childbirth-related deaths, and innumerable fatal diseases. Mercifully, we are participating in saving lives. But we are not assisting in creating a more compassionate balancing factor: reduction of births. We are allowing a time bomb to tick while we pile on food to hide it.

We must do what many a thoughtful leader in the developing world wants: aid in bringing a better life to all Africans, while at the same time helping plan life for those who will live in the future. We can do this with a rationally balanced platter of aid.

Food, bealth, bousing and other programs for families should have population-planning or child-spacing built in. We could hold to the current level of Agency for International Development dollars going to Africa for development whila greatly increasing contribution to help African planners provide maternal and child-health programs with family-planning components to halt runaway birth rates.

In every country visited, virtually all health, medical and demographic professionals at planning levels, soma ministers and high public officials, plus several progressive presidents, understand that their nations already have more children than they can provide for, even in a rural subsistence economy; that the problem worsens as people move to the city into a money economy; and that a significant percentage of African women are ready for help in child-spacing despite lingering tribal, cultural and religious traditions encouraging endless childbearing. There is a sophisticated awareness of the dangers of runaway population growth, and significant efforts to slow it.

We must greatly increase United States contributions to governments, private population groups, Roman Catholic and Protestant missionary services long involved in this work—usually as part of maternal and child-bealth programs, sometimes as community education from highest to lowest levels; and to institutes, foundations, associations and the United Nations Fund for Population Activities.

Failure to balance our bumanitarian, death-reducing programs with much-desired, voluntary birth-reducing programs will be setting the stage for awesome tragedy when the need for food and human services becomes impossible for the African continent and the caring world to meet. We would be playing triage on an inhuman, morally outrageous scale.
